

This comment is in reference to the proposed expansion of Low Power FM. Currently in my area we are served by a radio signal out of California that is repeated in our area on a translator. This radio station is a Christian alternative music station. There are no other stations in this area that provide such a musical format. While I like the Low Power FM program and believe it is a great way to allow communities to have more FM stations, the expansion of Low Power would take radio stations like Air1 Radio off the air in my area where there are no other stations like it. The service provided by Air1 radio is a great benefit to the community. They provide "rock" music that is positive and builds up young people instead of the music that is played on most other "rock" stations. Please don't force nationally translated radio stations like Air1 off the air with a change to the LPFM program.